University of Illinois

The predicted "end of the world" came and went with December 17 and the only thing that suffered any change was the thermometer; and instead of it burning up with the heat, it went down. Illinois with its 8,200 enrollment is very much the same in spite of everything. Even the enforced month's vacation caused by the coal shortage hardly worried the University, which so manipulated the time remaining that the double stress was barely noticeable.

While other organizations suffered for lack of fuel, we were fortunate in having sufficient to run us through the winter. The Sigs were forced to buy and split up into fire-wood the huge tree that stood in front of the Arcade. The Kappa Sigs, the Lambda Chis, and any number of other fraternities were compelled to close their houses and room with more fortunate friends. Finally the situation became crucial
