

satisfied that Illinois had perhaps a little better team than the two games previous had indicated, and so ended the season, with practically everyone, including Illibuck, in good spirits.

The week-end of the Ohio game the Chapter gave an informal dance, which was very successful. Val Fuller was on hand, along with Stan and Mrs. Hanssen, Steve Livermore and Mr. and Mrs. Livermore, Russ Putnam, Cliff Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. Sweeney and the incomparable Rolly Popken. Everything went along nicely, the punch held out, and the frosh didn't have much confetti to clean up.

The campus has assumed its winter air of yearning and labor, with the good students keeping their weather eyes peeled for finals. Entertainment has been afforded the otherwise commonplace school by the installation of an elaborate system of stop-and-go traffic signals, explained by a set of billboards at the entrance to campus thoroughfares, and intended to regulate, not students on their way to tardy eight, nine, ten o'clocks, but the rollicking flivvers which infest the roads and hamper, according to the dean's office, the perfect propagation of sweetness and light among Champaign's lusty ten thousand. Then, too, early classes in Uni Hall were almost brought to a standstill the other morning by the sight of an honest-to-goodness clothes line which graced the venerable and tenement-like court in the rear of the building. Strung from one fire escape to the other, it displayed to a shocked broad walk the following shameless items: A pair of Rockford hose (red), an athletic union suit, a pair of overalls, a set of henna stockings, a blue shirt, and some nameless feminine garments, all swinging gayly in the crisp December breeze.

Brother Jennings Fleischbein ducked his Michigan Union button and opened up a clothes shop for the purpose of Vanity-Fair-izing a rather dubious campus. He is at present enjoying considerable success, and entertaining the Chapter informally almost every afternoon among his heather mufflers and plus-four Sasiensis.

Since our last writing the Brothers have continued to make themselves indispensable to the college. Brother John Corley came through with the prize-winning team in the University "Y" campaign, assisted by Postulants Coke Miller (high man) and Pony Marshall. Swede Stahl was initiated to Sigma Tau amid much ceremony. Rufus, the leader in our own destinies, was chosen to guide those of the Post-Exam Jubilee, and with that exemplary Brotherly consideration which he so often evinces he at once named Nor Rice as his assistant. Brother Rice has recently been elected to Scribblers, honorary literary fraternity, and Daubers, a similar organization dedicated to the cause of art. Among the postulants we find Horace Marshall still going well on the Daily Illini business staff, Bob Abbott on the frosh swimming team, and Ray Vittum, our most recent acquisition, playing steadily on the freshman varsity basketball squad.
