

Dads Day was equally as great an occasion as Homecoming. The Illini won from their traditional rival, Chicago, on a field that was covered with mud and water. The drizzling rain caused the visitors to buy the town out of oil cloth, which they changed into weird-appearing slickers. After this game came the trek to Columbus in which many of the Brothers participated. I cannot say whether the game or the dance at Phi Pi was the greater attraction but they were both praised for weeks later. When the busy week-ends of the football season were over, campus life returned to normalcy.

On November 14, Phi Kappa held an informal pledge dance. The programs and decorations, which were Russian, were designed by Brother Rice. The orchestra was imported from Dick Greisser's home town, and any remarks concerning its fitness are to be referred to him.

The junior Brothers were well represented at the Prom this year, and not only juniors for "Rummy" and "Nor" were there. The Axe Grinders Ball, another prominent social event of the season, was rated by Brothers Rice, Corley, Klinkmann, Gillespie, and Green, and needless to say their costumes were surpassed by none.

The engaged Brothers after much soliciting have been paying their obligations to the Chapter. Joe Vaile, Mark Corley, and Davy Jones have passed cigars within the last month. We congratulate them, and are waiting for the opportunity to do so to several others—mentioning no names.

Initiation was held on November 13 for David B. Jones '28, Oak Park; J. Paul Green '27, Moline; and John R. Gillespie '28, Oak Park.

As usual the Brothers are doing their part in campus activities. Ralph Murphy, Graham Evans, and Frank Schunk are working for managerships. "I" Sweeney and Barney Wernsing are trying for positions on the baseball team. Dan Vittum is playing on the varsity basketball squad. Postulants Brown and Souder received numerals for freshman football. Pony Marshall and John Gillespie continue to be mainstays on the business staff of the Daily Illini. Brother Rice heads the art staff of this year's Illio. The House has teams competing in intermural volley ball and basketball.

Before leaving for the holidays, the customary Christmas party was given for the children of the Cunningham Orphans Home. Brothers Kennedy and Norton were present to help us entertain and even Dean Clark was our guest that evening. As in previous years, the Brothers found an excuse to be kids again and enjoyed playing with the children's toys.
