

THE boys who spent exciting summers in California, Montreal, New York, and Champaign have lost the spotlight down by the fireplace when it comes to telling their experiences. Bill Stewart is doing a single act. It consists of various anecdotes about Curly Walden's proficiency in a certain parlor game played with the same materials one uses for Bunco. Doubtlessly there are those at Ames, Iowa, who are telling of the same incident—but with more feeling. Phi Kappa sent Bill with Curly and Tom Stone of Phi Omicron to look over two petitioning locals at Ames. Between stories about Curly, Bill says he was very much impressed by the possibilities there.

At rushing this year we were aided by Curly Walden's presence and now have twelve promising pledges: Brad Rhoades and William Dial, both of Elgin; Warren Wisnasky, Effingham; Tom Wylie, Sterling; Earl Buchanan, Peoria; Richard Rydquist, St. Charles; Raymond Visser, Park Ridge; John Kreitzer, '34, Elliot; William Bingaman, '34, Chicago; Richard Locke, '32, and Phillip Locke, '35, both of Glen Ellyn; and Fred Binneweis, a graduate student in chemistry, who took his undergraduate work at Colorado State Teachers' College.

The pledges are already starting out to find their places on the campus. Phil Locke worked to clinch his numerals in freshman football while Earl Buchanan aimed toward the same end in wrestling. Dick Locke and Bill Dial are helping Bill Stewart keep the House on the winning side in campus politics. Dick has also gone military, belonging to Scabbard and Blade, Coast Artillery Club, and the Illini Flying Club.

The Brothers are not outdone by the pledges when it comes to campus activities. Gene Schooley, Wayne Morgan, Chuck Logan, and King Lantz are all members of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity. King is president of that organization and Chuck is one of the junior news
