In a German Home

LT. CARROLL W. BROWN '43 had a rather startling experience when he entered a house in Germany. On the wall he discovered a small sheet, approximately 10 × 7 inches, bearing the inscription printed above. It was natural that he would pay particular attention to anything bearing the sign of the Labarum. The town in which the house was located had been taken by the use of "marching fire," one of the toughest of military operations. Reconnaissance patrols had been surrounded, and the order was given to take the town at all costs. The Command Patrol, once the town was taken, was set up in the house where the inscription was found.

LT. FRED L. MOORE '44 writes: "I was crowded on the trip over but some of the men had deplorable conditions at best. It really made me laugh at some of those housing restrictions we fought at Illinois. And now I find myself in France, with a very nice French farm family and three of my men. We treat them as we'd like to be treated and the results are most beneficial. We get the stuff and Mama puts out very nice pies and cakes. Here we saw our first electric light and listened to our first radio in over three months. Quite a sensation. Showers once a month and we manage fairly well."

S/SGT. LELAND W. HAGMAN '41 is back in the States again at Section B ATC 1505th AAF Base Unit, Mather, California. He likes his work and enjoys peace-time conditions. His work is in communications.
