

Caveman Drag, our traditional Spring retardation, turned out that way. However, there was one amusing incident. Brother Ron Singleton, one of my pledge class cohorts, did a repeat from last year. At that time, the girl he had as a date, broke the record for the women's 50-yard dash through the cave, leaving Ron without even a match. So Ron decided that this year was going to be different. It was. The girl he had this year not only rebroke the record for the dash through the tunnel, but in addition broke the all-time record for a female running back to her residence! Ron said, "Well, you can't win them all." I agree.

Continuing on the social note, a few other things of interest have occurred. Brother Lloyd Marquardt, whom we left off in the last episode on the verge of getting pinned, did it! Vowing up and down for weeks previous that HE would never do that, on a lovely spring night in May he capitulated. Who the female is I have no idea (Mr. Lloyd probably does not either), but that is irrelevant.

Another amusing incident happened to Brothers Kent Yauch and John Meyer. It seems that midway through an exchange in March, they decided to switch girls (or possibly the girls decided to switch them). Anyway, after the exchange, girl number one called up Brother Yauch and asked him out, an incident which caused quite an outbreak of laughter in the house. Girl number one's stipulation was, however, that girl number two also go out with Brother Meyer. Well, halfway through the night the boys decided it was time to play musical date again, and so they did. The only problem that resulted from this farcicality was that the next time Brothers Yauch and Meyer wanted to ask the girls out, they forgot who they had been with the time before.

The bomb tests have also been resumed now that Spring is in full swing. Brother Paul Bond's girl conducted the first test when she sent a small megaton charge with the message that they had better not go out any more. As far as more exploding news from around here goes, Brother Glenn Johnson has invented a new game called "Catch Glenn." You see, he has been conducting experiments with the human entity lately in connection with a home study course and has vowed that his experiments are completely esoteric. Since all of us were very interested in these experiments, Glenn found it hard to keep them secret, and consequently dropped the course. Oh well, such is fraternity life!

Formal Rush was held in April and although we do not know our results, we are confident of a pledge class to the tune of 20. To add to this, we are expecting to pledge more men informally over the summer.
