

Brother bills with help of computer

By Michael A. Berger

¶ It was that time again. The executive committee was taking petitions for various House offices, and I was attending so that I could find out who our future leaders were to be. No one had petitioned for the job of Assistant Treasurer. As always, my big mouth got in the way, and I was soon the new assistant treasurer.

Being lazy and a computer science major (they are not mutually exclusive), I decided to let a computer do my work for me. Over Christmas break, I wrote the Phi Kappa Accounting Program.
