☞ It's been a busy semester for the Little Sisters at Phi Kappa. The girls came back from Christmas vacation well rested and ready to have some "heavy duty" fun. To ring in the new school year, the Crow Brothers and Little Sisters got together and took over a local bar, Dooley's for a night during New Student Week. School began again all too soon, and to celebrate, the girls and the Brothers got together again for a Friday afternoon happy hour that was a super weekend primer.

To raise money this semester, the girls showed the House and the campus that they can really cook. The week before Valentine's Day, the girls got together and baked, iced, and personalized hundreds of large heart-shaped cookies.

Of course, the Brothers couldn't resist "helping" out. Not surprisingly, they soon found out that although it was fun to ice the cookies, it was a lot more fun to put icing on the Little Sisters and any other unsuspecting soul who ventured too near the kitchen.

Valentine's Eve

While the girls delivered the cookies on Valentine's Day, the Brothers set up for a big Valentine's Eve bash to show how much they appreciated the ladies' hard work. Big Brothers for the Little Sisters were announced, and everyone reveled with their newfound relatives until the wee hours of the morning.

The thanks for all these good times goes to the hard working new Little Sister officers, Betsy Lee, Jana Fairow, Renee, Moomey, Sue Burns, and Helen Karechi. Thanks to their help, the semester so far has been a barrel of fun.

Of course, with events like rack-outs, Brother—Little Sis softball games, the Little Sister fund raiser movie, initiation of about 15 more new Little Sisters, and plenty of parties, the rest of the semester promises to be just as active. ☞
